2020
IMPACT REPORT
Dear KIND Community,

We are excited to share with you our first-ever KIND Impact Report, giving you an inside look at our collective impact in 2020. With your support, we furthered our mission to create a kinder and healthier world. We brought our KIND Promise – of crafting foods that lead with a nutrient-dense ingredient – into new categories and countries. And we increased our focus on breaking down barriers to create more inclusive and empathetic communities.

While I am personally proud of WHAT we have accomplished, I am even prouder of HOW we did it. The stories inside this report are a testament to our team’s and community’s resilience, integrity and commitment to modeling the values we want to see in society.

Together, we tackled a challenging year with empathy, nuanced critical thinking and respect for one another regardless of our differences.

I look forward to all that we will achieve together as we continue on our journey to build the world’s foremost health and wellness platform.

Warmest,
Daniel Lubetzky
KIND Founder

OUR MISSION
create a kinder and healthier world — one act, one snack at a time

our ingredients
We believe you shouldn’t have to compromise between health and taste. Our family of over 100 snacks all lead with a nutrient-dense first ingredient – such as nuts, whole grains or fruit – and are not made with genetically engineered ingredients, sugar alcohols or artificial sweeteners. That’s the KIND Promise.

our foundation
We established The KIND Foundation, a separate 501(c)(3) non-profit organization, in 2016 to deepen our impact of fostering kinder, more empathetic communities. From supporting frontline workers to sparking connections between students across the globe, the mission is brought to life through a variety of programs that bring communities together. Our approach is to create and invest in initiatives that will have scalable, lasting impact.

defined by the COVID-19 pandemic and the movement for racial equality

KIND teammates rallied to support each other and our communities
When the COVID-19 pandemic began, we leaned into what we know best – the importance of nutritious food and the value of kindness.

Frontline workers leading the COVID-19 response are risking their lives to keep us safe. The KIND Foundation launched the FRONTLINE IMPACT PROJECT in the U.S., a platform mobilizing companies to direct donations to frontline institutions in need.

“Your donation nourished our bodies so that we could continue to fight on the frontlines.”

approaching mental health with kindness

After losing his father to suicide as a teenager, Harry Corin has found purpose in creating supportive spaces to speak about mental health. Amid the early days of the pandemic, Harry recognized the impact that the stress and isolation would have on mental health. He started hosting talks for his KIND colleagues, creating a safe place for team members to get mental health information, support and wellness tips.

“We’re a brand that believes in the power of kindness and kind acts for others,” said Harry. “Through these conversations, we can have a big impact.”

When the Mental Health Foundation designated kindness as the theme for Mental Health Awareness Week in May, our UK team was inspired to expand the reach of Harry’s talks.

We created a series on mental health and kindness and offered it to our customers and their employees, drawing 1,500 participants over the course of 15 talks.

CREATING SPACE FOR WELLNESS AND CONNECTION

Across cities and time zones, teammates around the world came together for a virtual Wellness Week during the early days of the global pandemic. From martial arts training to cooking workshops, activities promoted movement, mindfulness and connection. The success of the first Wellness Week in May inspired a bigger activation in September.

team member spotlight: Blair Hirak

While many of us worked from home in 2020, team members united in incredible ways to keep the camaraderie of our team going strong. For Blair Hirak and those who know her, creating ways to connect with her team was a natural role to play. “I wanted to bring us together and get some laughs in. It gave me purpose at a time when everything was uncertain.”

Blair organized a series of virtual events for her teammates, including comedy shows, Pilates classes and a tour of an animal sanctuary. She also looked for ways to support people who have been out of work during the pandemic, like organizing a mixology class with a bartender from New York City.

Blair’s events brought joy to so many team members and connected us at a time when we needed it most. Through this work, she saw the spirit of KIND shine through. “I think our culture has become even stronger since we’ve been virtual. It has strengthened our bond as we go through this big challenge together.”
Racism has no place in our world and no place within KIND

In the spring of 2020, the tragic killings of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor and Ahmaud Arbery sparked a national conversation about racial inequity and injustice. We affirmed our long-standing commitment to foster empathy and kindness to ensure that we all recognize our shared humanity and nurture a culture of authentic respect toward all.

The Diversity, Equity & Inclusion Action Team is championing this critical work at KIND. Through their steadfast leadership, we are working to make positive and constructive change for the long term.

SOME OF THE STEPS WE TOOK IN 2020

- Hosted several Community Conversations, establishing a safe forum for KIND team members to share in dialogue about racial prejudice and bias. Launched “Partnering for Perspective” for teammates to both learn from others and share their point of view on various topics, like a session on the history of voting rights in partnership with the American Civil Liberties Union.

- Completed Unconscious Bias Workshops. Team members learned how biases might show up at work and the importance of actively creating an inclusive environment. We committed to developing personal action plans to combat bias through continued education and empowerment.

- Committed to acts of solidarity on Juneteenth. Some team members marched for racial justice, while over 90 team members participated in a film screening and discussion centered around racial understanding and perspective building.

- Adopted two Historically Black Colleges and Universities to help further support and provide opportunities for tomorrow’s changemakers. Through this program, we have committed to fund over $100,000 in student scholarships and create a program that offers students opportunities for internships, career coaching and networking with industry leaders.
team member spotlight: Nia Mack Rodney

When Nia Mack Rodney joined our DEI Action Team, she was in search of the right platform to do her part in service of the Black community. “I remember feeling personally overwhelmed. Joining the DEI Action Team, I realized this is how I can make a difference – more than I could if I was marching in the streets.”

Nia has been integral to a number of DEI Action Team programs launched in 2020 to increase engagement around diversity, inclusivity and belonging at KIND. This includes both racial justice initiatives and programs around the value of voting. And the work in 2020 is just the start.

“I’m proud of how our company has recognized where we can do better.”

We have matured and evolved in our approach to DEI to be the best KIND we can be. Incorporating this into our culture will have incredible impact on people and business going forward.”

Nia Mack Rodney, Senior Shopper Marketing Manager at KIND

Time to Vote Movement: We participated in the business-led initiative for the second year, setting dedicated time and enhanced flexibility for team members to vote before and on Election Day.

The Frontline of Democracy: During the U.S. election, The KIND Foundation extended the reach of Frontline Impact Project, partnering with local election boards and 11 companies to donate more than 120,000 items to election workers. KIND also donated over 1 million bars and participated in the Pizza to the Polls initiative to feed Americans waiting in line to cast their vote.

disrupting new categories with healthy snacking

Our products are central to the KIND mission to create a healthier world. We entered several new snack categories in 2020, marking our biggest year of innovation to date. KIND® is now in over eight grocery store aisles – from snack mix to the frozen section.

In 2020, we also welcomed Nature’s Bakery to the KIND family. Known for their beloved Fig Bars and other soft-baked foods, their better-for-you snacks prioritize real, simple and wholesome ingredients.

Like all KIND® snacks, the newest offerings elevate people’s experience and deliver on the KIND Promise: the first ingredient is a nutrient-dense food recommended for daily consumption.
empowering our community to make informed choices

In January 2020, we became the first national snack brand to adopt new nutrition research from the United States Department of Agriculture, furthering our commitment to transparency surrounding our products and their ingredients.

The research found that whole nuts have fewer calories than previously thought due to the way our bodies digest their fat. Almonds and cashews contribute 19% and 16% fewer calories, respectively. Despite contributing fewer calories, the nutrition profile of these nuts remains the same.

lifting up community food organizations

With unprecedented need during the pandemic, local food non-profits are doing critical work to feed communities. We are proud to stand by our long-term partners as well as support new ones during these challenging times.

“Our work would not be possible without the generous support of food donors like KIND, who help fill our trucks with nutritious food.”

- Senior Manager of Donor Relations and Supply Chain at City Harvest

In addition to product donations, The KIND Foundation also provided World Central Kitchen with a $100,000 donation to support their efforts to activate thousands of restaurants and kitchens to provide meals for people in need around the globe.

Rallied support with the Alice Paul Institute for the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment to guarantee equal legal rights for all Americans regardless of sex. KIND collected petition signatures via a mobile text campaign and donated $1 to the Alice Paul Institute for every signed petition shared on Twitter.

“The Ali Forney Center gives opportunities to people that otherwise wouldn’t have the chance. To me, that’s doing the kind thing.

Working with the Ali Forney Center and other organizations, we’re giving back to our communities and helping people in the areas we live and work. I love working for KIND and the mission we’re on.”

creating a habit of kindness across the globe

Leading up to World Kindness Day on November 13, we launched #21DAYSKind, a global initiative to inspire daily acts of kindness. Over 21 days – the amount of time it takes to form a habit – we challenged our team and community to join us in building a habit of kindness.

Across 25 countries, #21DAYSKind inspired a ripple of daily acts of kindness from the United States to China and many places in between! Our team also participated in virtual volunteer opportunities to support local charities in our own backyard.

Since 2017, we have launched KIND in more than 35 countries. #21DAYSKind marked our first global campaign in support of our efforts to maximize the impact of the KIND mission around the world.

“Seeing how #21DAYSKind inspired kindness, it gives us opportunity for hope. Now more than ever this campaign was needed.”

KINDER TO OUR PLANET: 2020 IMPACT

growing the marketplace for bee-friendly almonds

As the purchasers of 1-2% of the world’s almonds, we have the ability and responsibility to address an issue integral to our #1 ingredient* – protecting pollinators like bees and butterflies. In 2020, we became the first snack company to commit to exclusively source 100% of our almonds from bee-friendly farms.

OUR ALMOND SUPPLIERS ARE:

Reserving 3-5% of their farmland to create dedicated pollinator habitats by 2025

Immediately eliminating the use of neonicotinoids and chlorpyrifos, two pesticide treatments harmful to pollinators

We invested $150,000 in the Williams Lab at the University of California, Davis to help answer critical questions about bee health and track the efficacy of these farm-level improvements. We will also collaborate with the Environmental Defense Fund on emerging opportunities for improved orchard management.

rethinking packaging

KIND is aspiring to reach 100% recyclability, compostability or reusability across all of our plastic packaging by 2025, while also reducing the use of single-use plastic overall.

As part of this pledge, we signed the Ellen MacArthur Foundation’s New Plastics Economy Global Commitment, aligning with the Foundation’s vision for a circular economy for plastic so that it never becomes waste or pollution.

We are also a member of the Sustainable Packaging Coalition, the leading voice on sustainable packaging, through which we hope to champion new packaging solutions in partnership with the broader food industry.

POWERED BY WIND

In 2020, we purchased enough renewable energy credits to cover our U.S. offices and manufacturing sites. But we know we can go further. In 2021, we will begin to integrate renewable energy sources into our direct operations.
In memory of Jeff Aitken

In late 2019, we lost a beloved member of the KIND family. Jeff Aitken was a cherished colleague and friend, who personified the spirit of KIND in every way. With great appreciation for the lasting impact that Jeff left on our organization, we dedicate this report to his memory.
